APPENDIX A

List of Topics for CPSC Witnesses

1. Warnings

- a. How CPSC determines/evaluates the role of product warnings in the area of product safety.
- b. Role of warnings under the Federal Hazardous Substances Act (FHSA), 15 USC Secs. 1261-1278..
- c. Analysis of adequacy of the warnings on packaging for Zen Magnet Rare Earth Magnetic Spheres (Zen Magnets), Magnicube Magnetic Balls and Magnetic Cubes and Neoballs
- d. The bases for allegations that no warnings could be devised that would effectively communicate the hazard associated with Zen Magnets, Magnicubes and Neoballs so that they could be heeded and understood by consumers to avoid ingestion.
- e. The effectiveness/role of choking warning labels for products for children 3-6 with small parts, marbles, and small balls.
- f. Analysis of the value of product warnings and education to warn/alert consumers, including parents, about hazards associated with consumer products such as small balls, marbles, balloons, corded baby monitors, laundry pods, window coverings and button batteries.
- g. Analysis of CPSC education and warning campaign for high powered small rare-earth magnets.
- h. Comparison of CPSC education campaign for high powered small rare-earth magnets with laundry pods, pencil erasers, window coverings, button batteries and corded baby monitors.

2. CPSC analysis of whether hazards associated with adult products that are dangerous for children can be warned against.

3. Risk Assessment

- a. CPSC procedures for conducting risk assessment.
- b. Analysis of difference in risks associated with Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs and those of Buckyballs and Buckycubes.
- c. Basis for determining preliminarily that Zen Magnets, Magnicube Spheres, Magnicube cubes and Neoballs are defective and a substantial product hazard.
- d. Basis for determining preliminarily that Zen Magnets, Magnicube Spheres cubes and Neoballs are defective and a substantial product hazard.

e. Basis for allegation that Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs fail to operate as intended (i.e., for adults and not children).

f. Analysis of NEISS data with regard to high powered small rare-earth magnets.

4. Whether adult products that present a risk of injury to children render the product defective, and the basis for any conclusions.

5. Human Factors

a. Criteria used to determine whether Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs are children's products and the weight given to each of the statutory factors.

b. Basis for the allegation that Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs are intensely appealing to children due to their tactile features, small size and highly reflective, shiny, and colorful metallic coatings.

c. Basis for the allegation that Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs move in unexpected, incongruous ways.

d. Basis for allegation that Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs can evoke awe and amusement among children, enticing them to play with the products.

e. Basis for allegation that the smoothness, uniqueness and soft snapping sound made by Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs makes them appealing to children.

f. Basis for allegation that design is defective because some parents and caregivers give or allow children to play with the products.

g. Basis for allegation that risk is neither obvious nor intuitive.

6. Bases for CPSC's allegations relating to gender and harm to women in the complaints against Respondents Zen and Star

7. Bases for CPSC's allegations relating to utility in the marketplace in the complaints against Respondents Zen and Star.

a. Evaluation of the products' utility.

b. Evaluation of the necessity of the products for consumers.

- e. Evaluation of CPSC and Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association's education program for baby monitors.
- f. Video news release and education program launched in November 2011.

9. Incidents

- a. CPSC analysis of incidents and/or ingestion directly related to Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs
- b. Relation of number of products in the marketplace to incidents.

10. Consumer Responsibility

- a. CPSC analysis of the role of adults in supervising children to minimize/prevent access to dangerous adult products.

11. Enforcement Efforts

- a. Efforts by CPSC to prevent the sale of aggregated masses of high-powered, small rare earth magnets since the filing of the complaints against Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs including enforcement efforts involving Amazon and competitors of Zen Magnets, Magnicubes Spheres and Magnicube Cubes, and Neoballs.
- b. Basis for the settlement with Strong Force (Neocubes) where consumers merely were told to discard their high powered magnets.
- c. Decision not to promote the Strong Force (Neocube) settlement on cpsc.gov or to issue a press release.
- d. Basis for settlement with Baby Matters LLC (Nap Nanny) in June 2013 resulting in warnings to consumers to discard product.

e. Whether there has been any enforcement effort against dynaflexpro.com (<http://www.dynaflexpro.com/store/magnalinx-gunmetal-magnetic-bracelet.html>) regarding any recalls or “stop sales” of their products.

f. Whether there has been any enforcement effort against Nanodots.com and the subject products identified in the Complaints in these consolidated actions.

g. Whether the CPSC has requested voluntary corrective action or a recall or stopping the sale of the products sold at Nanodots.com.

h. Whether the CPSC has requested corrective action or a recall or stopping the sale of products sold at http://www.amazon.com/Neodymium-Magnets-inch-Cube-N48/dp/B003VWST5C/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&qid=1380395740&sr=8-1&keywords=buckycubes.
