Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to you concerning an incident that occurred in my home at 4pm on 12/26/84 while using one of your products in accordance with manufacturer's instructions.

On October or November 1984 I purchased one of your 4 quart glass baking dishes for $6.99 at The Scepter in New Bedford (MA). The information on the label specifically reads "safe to oven, microwave oven, dishwasher safe". I had used the dish for baking without any problems approximately 5 times prior to 12/26/84. On that date, I prepared my chicken dish in the customary fashion for baking at 425°F but approximately 15 minutes into the baking time I heard a large boom coming from the oven. When I opened the oven door, I found that the dish had exploded into hundreds of pieces. (Please see the enclosed instructions) Anticipating not seriously injured since I was not looking into the oven at the time. However, I consider it my responsibility as a person concerned with consumer safety to inform you of such an incident in the event that it may represent a defect in the product that could indicate the need for a recall from the market. Additionally, this incident caused a great inconvenience for me & my husband. As a working woman, I depend on reliable products for use in the home. To say the least, I was extremely upset & disappointed over the performance of your product. Please contact me immediately regarding this incident.
