About CPSC

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission is charged with protecting the public from unreasonable risks of injury or death associated with the use of the thousands of types of consumer products under the agency's jurisdiction. Deaths, injuries, and property damage from consumer product incidents cost the nation more than $800 billion annually. CPSC is committed to protecting consumers and families from products that pose a fire, electrical, chemical, or mechanical hazard.

CPSC's work to ensure the safety of consumer products — such as toys, cribs, power tools, cigarette lighters, and household chemicals — contributed to a significant decline in the rate of deaths and injuries associated with consumer products over the past 30 years.

Under federal law, it is illegal to attempt to sell or resell a recalled product.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) is working for you, your family, and your community to make consumer products safer than ever.

Connect with CPSC!

Tell CPSC if you experience an incident with a consumer product or have a product safety concern by logging on to www.SaferProducts.gov.

SaferProducts.gov is our new website that collects reports from consumers like you about safety issues with consumer products. The information you share about your incident or safety concern helps CPSC, and it can help other consumers, too.

See Reports from Others Stay informed!

Search SaferProducts.gov for incidents with specific products that you currently own or products that you are thinking about buying. You can also view manufacturers' comments about reports. Use this information to protect your family.

We protect your privacy. Your name and contact information will never appear on the SaferProducts.gov database. You will be asked if you want CPSC to give your name and contact information to the manufacturer, importer or private labeler that you identified in your report.
